Important Considerations for SNHU Term Start Dates

Registration Deadlines

It is crucial for students to register before the official start date of each term. SNHU typically sets registration deadlines about a week prior to the start date, but these can vary depending on the session. Missing the deadline may mean delaying registration to the next session.

Orientation and Onboarding

New students are usually required to complete orientation before their first class. The orientation sessions are scheduled close to the start date, often online or in-person, to prepare students for their coursework and familiarize them with university resources.

Academic Planning Tips

1. Check the official SNHU academic calendar regularly for updated start dates and deadlines.
2. Plan your registration around your personal schedule to ensure timely enrollment.

3. Consider applying early for financial aid or scholarships to align with your start date.
4. Contact academic advisors if you need assistance in choosing courses aligned with your start date.
