What Is the New Testament?

Definition and Scope

The New Testament is a collection of 27 books written in Greek during the first century AD. These texts include gospels, letters (epistles), a historical narrative, and apocalyptic writings. The Jewish people, including early Christians, faced Roman rule, internal divisions, and evolving religious beliefs. The writings reflect these contexts and aim to spread the Christian message amidst challenges.

Major Sections of the New Testament

Epistles (Letters)

The majority of the New Testament comprises letters written by early Christian leaders to various churches and individuals. These epistles address theological issues, ethical conduct, and community challenges.

How the New Testament Was Formed

Canonization Process

The process of canonization—the selection of books considered authoritative—took several centuries. Early Christian communities recognized certain writings as inspired based on apostolic authorship, doctrinal consistency, and widespread use in worship.

Major Councils and Decisions

1. Synod of Hippo (393 AD)
2. Council of Carthage (397 AD)

These councils ratified the current 27-book canon of the New Testament.

Differences Among Christian Denominations

Roman Catholic, Orthodox, and Protestant Perspectives

While the core of the New Testament remains the same, different Christian traditions vary in their interpretation and emphasis:

1. Roman Catholic: Recognizes additional books in the Old Testament (Deuterocanonical) but agrees on the New Testament canon.
2. Eastern Orthodox: Similar to Catholics but with slight variations in the canon.
3. Protestant: Typically adheres to the 66 books of the Old and New Testaments without the Deuterocanonical texts.
