Overview of "Peace Child"

Background and Context Don Richardson, a Christian missionary, arrived in the remote and hostile tribes of the Sawi in the early 1960s. The Sawi were known for their fierce warfare, treachery, and complex social customs rooted in their worldview. Richardson's initial goal was to share the Christian message; however, he soon discovered that conventional evangelism methods failed due to the Sawi's deeply ingrained cultural values. The narrative unfolds as Richardson seeks to understand and adapt to the Sawi's worldview, which is characterized by:

- A culture rooted in treachery and revenge
- A belief system where trust is difficult and dangerous
- A social order that emphasizes honor and loyalty through complex rituals

The Turning Point The breakthrough came when Richardson learned about the Sawi's custom of the "peace child." This unique practice involved giving a child as a symbol of peace between warring tribes. If a tribe wanted to reconcile with an enemy, they would give a child to the opposing tribe, signifying a pledge of peace. The child became a living emblem of reconciliation, and the tribes would cease hostilities to protect and honor this peace child.
